I have received my provincial rebate and want to know why I am being discriminated as a Canadian citizen for not the GST rebate. I see that race nor colour should be no discrimination in this Country so why are we doing this for people buying ECO cars even if they where purchased in I have not made any attempt to apply as it is quite clear that in the terms currently laid out that I would not be eligible (therefore the application would simply be bounced by TC's frontline staff). It is also very obviuos that there is

I believe that all cars that meet requirements (ie are on the list of Eco Cars) should be elible for the rebate program irregardless of where they have been purchased, as long as they are to be registered in Canada. To do otherwise is only an opportunity for Canadian Dealers, to take advantage of this program to raise the price of these cars an amount equal to the rebate or not reduce the price as would be the result in an unsubsidized market. At this time I have not tried to claim my rebate as I believe that it would If the goal of the eco-rebate is to provide Canadians with incentive to reduce their carbon footprint, what does it matter where you're purchasing your vehicle from unless the gov't of Canada is getting kickbacks from the car

I had BOS which clearly mention car as new, Feds charged me the GST on same amount. I had MCO to prove that I am the first owner.□

If the purpose of this rebate is to promote fuel efficient and clean burning vehicles why does it matter where the vehicle was purchased? A vehicle imported from the US should not be excluded if otherwise it qualifies. You are driving the car in Canada and buying gas in Canada resulting in reduced fuel consumed and cleaner air. When I imported my Prius it the ecorebate program was announced with no mention of this imported car exclusion. The Prius was hardly available from Canadian dealers with only perhaps one car available at very few dealers (others had none). The limited supply was only in certain configuration none matching my requirements. The waiting list was extra long with very long delays.□

EcoAuto rebates should absolutely apply on all new hybrid vehicles purchased. Doesn't matter if they are purchased at a Canadian dealer or imported from the US. Both ways the consumer pays the GST on the vehicle and as a result should get a rebate. Ontario government honours the PST rebate on hybrid vehicles imported into Canada from the
